The screenshot displays the USC Shoah Foundation's Visual History Archive interface. At the top, there is a navigation menu with links for 'About Us', 'Search', 'Search History', 'Projects', 'Help', and 'Contact'. The user 'Eva Czeglédi' is logged in. The main header identifies the organization as 'USC Shoah Foundation Visual History Archive' and the current page as 'Viewing Screen'.

The central focus is a video player titled 'Heda Kopse'. The video shows an elderly woman with short, wavy grey hair, wearing a black top, seated in a room with bookshelves. The video player includes standard controls: back, play/pause, forward, a volume icon, and a progress bar with 'Fast' and 'Slow' markers. Below the video player, a search results list is visible, showing 'PQ Full Testimony' with 1-20 of 15,178 records. The first result is a snippet about surviving the Nazi Holocaust, followed by a link to 'Dissertation Abstracts International (Mar 1987)'. The second result is '20. Educators and attitudes: Holocaust education in Orthodox day schools' from 'ProQuest Dissertations and Theses (2006)'. A 'load more' button is located below the search results.

On the right side of the video player, there is a small thumbnail of the video, a 'Tape: 1 of 2' dropdown, and radio buttons for 'Video' and 'Slide Show'. Below these is a map showing the location of the video recording, with a red pin and the Google logo. At the bottom right, there are several utility buttons: 'Maximize/Minimize Data', 'Next Result', 'Previous Result', 'Back to Search Results', 'New Search', 'Save to Projects', and 'Print Testimony'.

At the bottom of the page, there are links for 'Terms of Use' and 'Privacy Policy (Updated Nov 1, 2017)', and a copyright notice: 'Copyright © 2017 USC Shoah Foundation (Version 6.7.5.0)'. ABSTRACT

EDUCATORS AND ATTITUDES:
HOLOCAUST EDUCATION IN ORTHODOX DAY SCHOOLS

by Hanita Kass

The purpose of this exploratory study was to assess the potential viability of Holocaust education for students of grades 5-8 in New York Orthodox day schools.

The researcher surveyed educators of grades 5-8 who were employed during the 2003-2004 school years in New York Orthodox Jewish day schools, most of which commemorate Yom Hashoah; all of which teach their students about the Holocaust.

She explored two issues: (a) educator support for teaching about the Holocaust to these middle grade students; and (b) the relationship between each of four educator demographics—age, gender, religious affiliation and relationship with Holocaust survivors—and the educators' attitudes (expressed as levels of support) toward teaching

Ljubljana—Strategic City

Special to The Christian Science Monitor

WASHINGTON—Ljubljana, reported to have been entered by the Germans, is in the extreme north-west corner of Yugoslavia, only 25 airline miles south of the border of Nazi Austria, and an even shorter crow's flight distance from the Italian frontier to the west.

A bulletin from the National Geographic Society points out that Ljubljana (pronounced Lyoo-byah-nah) was the Austrian city of Laibach until the treaties after the World War incorporated the town and the surrounding region of Slavonia, of which it was the capital, in the new kingdom of Yugoslavia.

With about 80,000 inhabitants, Ljubljana is the fourth largest city in Yugoslavia. The city, now capital of Yugoslavian Carniola, dominates the road and rail routes southeastward down the broad valley of the Sava River to Zagreb, 80 miles away, and the Danubian plains.

Ljubljana lies in the flat, fertile valley of the Ljubljanca River, a tributary of the Sava, with the Carnic Alps to the north, the Julian Alps to the west, and the green summits of the Karst region to the south. High above the city towers the old Schlos-berg, with its romantic medieval fortress-castle.

The city is rich in architecture, painting, and sculpture. But its chief modern importance is as a busy commercial and manufacturing town. Its factories turn out iron wares, machinery, leather, textiles, paper, furniture, pottery, matches, and chemicals.

The city's university is Yugoslian.
